Your Baby's Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Cleanliness long has been considered one of the prime virtues for human beings of all ages.

Habits of cleanliness include a full bath at least twice a week, and preferably once a day, regular washing of the hands and face as needed, and invariably washing of the hands before eating and after going to the toilet.

Habits of cleanliness also include brushing of the teeth, preferably every morning and every night before going to bed.

Finally, there is the habit of internal cleanliness, which involves regular bowel movements, established preferably as a habit each morning immediately after breakfast.

Mothers should establish a routine of cleanliness for their children. This does not mean that a child should be immaculate all day long. If it does, it is likely to get dirty at frequent intervals. But it must learn that cleanliness invariably precedes eating.

Cleanliness will include not only the daily bath, but brushing of the hair, cleaning of the finger nails, and a suitable shampoo.

A child who plays outdoors at the beach may need to have his head washed every three or four days. After such head washing, the soap is rinsed out. If the scalp is too dry, some olive oil may be rubbed in.

Cleanliness is much more likely to become habitual if it is made easy. The washstand should not be too high, the soap should be easy to reach, the mirror should not be so high that the child cannot see itself washing and the towel should be readily available.

This does not mean a midsize bathroom for every home. It does mean, however, suitable boxes or steps on which to stand and a towel rack exclusively for the child. It is remarkable how many mothers can be accomplished in establishing good habits if they are made easy rather than hard to acquire.

The home is the proper place in which to establish habits, since most of the child's time is spent in the home.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

"Why isn't Julie home and dressed for the evening? I saw her in Jones' back yard just now, sitting on a fence and as dirty as sin."

"Keep your coat on, Charles. She's coming. I sent Sophie over and she says they are just finishing a Wild West Show."

"It's nearly six o'clock. And Julie's getting to be too much of a Tomboy anyway. I like my women folk dressed when I get home."

"Well, you know I do have a rule, Charles. She's supposed to be bathed and dressed by five every afternoon. Only sometimes they all get so interested in a game it seems a shame to break it up."

Charles snapped open the paper and looked over the headlines.

Obvious to All Else

But he wasn't through talking. Julie had not come, and across the lawn he could hear war whistles that bore no resemblance to fireworks.

"No, don't. It isn't just this once, or not being dressed time after time that I mind so much. But I've noticed her right along. She stays at the movies for two shows almost every time she goes. When she's been to a party, I have to go and drag her out of the kitchen after everybody else has left. At the park, too, she sits with or children are getting dressed. I have to fairly rope her out of the water."

"It's always that way. She's like one of those mud-suckers I used to catch in the river. Once you get her on a line you can't get her off, without an operation."

"Well, grumpy, what's wrong with that? She has a zest for living and she likes people. I think it shows good quality. Julie goes into everything with all her heart and she's very popular."

"I know all that. And I'm not criticizing, just trying to explain something. I think she loses herself too much in everything she does, which was all right when she was little. But now she has to be taught to control time and to think ahead. Every one of us has to say deep in his mind, 'I'm enjoying this, but what comes next? Is it time for lunch, or dinner, or to see somebody about something?'"

Doesn't Think Ahead

"She'll learn that."

"No, she won't. She isn't the kind. When she is having a good time she becomes temperate. She loves a double orgy of sensation. She forgets there is a world outside of what she's doing. She is the oldest in the crowd today. So it's up to her to jump off the fence and say, 'Good bye kids. I have to go home. It's late.'"

Julie had to be pried loose, as she made no move to come home. Her father was right about her. Nearly all children lack awareness of something ahead; some lack it altogether. It is excellent training in control to tell them that nothing can last forever. It is one phase of "responsibility" that is very important.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

A thoroughly jealous person is a person mentally unbalanced, apt to cut loose at any moment with an impulsive and unthinking act of violence.

If you have not already gathered as much from these newspaper stories which bear such headlines as "Blond Shoots Banker," you can imagine the lesson a bit more elegantly in Mrs. Helene Lowndes' new novel, "The Second Key" (Longmans-Green; $2).

Here we have a study of a rather primitive and none too intellectual person who is worked upon by jealousy and turned, at last, into a mad killer.

The person in question is the dainty young wife of a rigid and purse-proud old-British millionaire. This chap has installed her as the chateleine of his expensive country place and has surrounded her with every comfort—except the chance to make a few friends of her own age.

As a result, when this rather simple female does meet a personable young man, she falls in love with him, acquires a key to his town apartment, and uses it avidly. You sense, from the moment she puts her foot into this not uncommon situation, that it will end in a grand smash-up. It does.

For her amour has another lady on his string; and the young wife finds out about it, in the end. In the twinkling of a neye she turns from a quiet and demure young person into a raging murderess. Which, of course, brings retribution to the high hopes of herself, her husband, and the boy friend.

It makes a smooth, easy-to-read melodrama, unpretentious and swift moving.

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD: Autograph hunters have sent the movie stars into hiding—behind an assortment of disguises.

The stars have even had to leave at home their chauffeurs and black-limousines, because celebrity stalkers have learned to identify all such elegant equipages on the streets.

Thus, whenever she is in a hurry, Kay Francis goes about in a dusty and rather battered little car of popular make, and doesn't want to be stopped for autographs.

Claudette Colbert has taken to driving herself in a small sedan on shopping expeditions. Also, she wears a long tweed coat, dark glasses, and a soft hat pulled low over her eyes.

Clark Gable usually gets about in an open roadster, also of modest make. And he wears dark glasses.

Warren William and Katharine Hepburn have only recently abandoned their conspicuous big cars. Now they drive station wagons which, at a glance, may be mistaken for delivery cars.

Eyes Under Cover

Dark glasses make a rather obvious disguise, but a no less effective one, since hundreds of nonentities also wear them about town, purely for comfort. Dick Powell belongs to the goggle brigade.

Jean Harlow took to a dark wig and glasses to escape detection while she was making personal appearances in Chicago.

Mistaken for Garbo

Carole Lombard had a disguise backfire on her the other day when she ventured into downtown Los Angeles to do some shopping. She wore tailored tweeds and dark glasses, and scarcely had left her car when someone yelled: "There's Greta Garbo!"

Hey! When Did That Happen?

Immediately she was surrounded by a gawking throng, and couldn't move until she removed the goggles and proved she wasn't the elusive Swede. Oddly enough, because she had her hair combed straight back, and because the crowd was expecting to see Garbo, nobody recognized her as Miss Lombard.

Acting Off Stage

Some of the stars are more ingenious about dodging admirers. Rosalind Russell made herself up as an old woman and attended a preview. In gray wig and shawl she moved around in the crowd and wasn't noticed, except by a policeman, who thought she didn't belong there.

Charles Butterworth employs a simple device. Fans have never seen him smile on the screen, so in public places he goes about serenely wearing a fixed grin. Looks like a different person.

For premieres, Ginger Rogers sometimes effects a black wig, cut in Dutch bob style. It always works. Ann Harding wears a dark wig during her shopping excursions. Bette Davis just arranges her own hair differently. Al Jolson started east, recently all decked out in a set of George Bernard Shaw whiskers, but that was mostly a gag.

Simple Tricks

Joan Blondell gets into an old-fashioned sunbonnet when she wants to walk with her young son, Norman, between the house and the child's favorite playground.

Leslie Howard, while here, discovered that fans confused him with his son at first glance. So, before leaving a car, he'd send Leslie, Jr., into the crowd of autograph collectors. A few seconds' later, Papa Howard would slip through unnoticed.

Paul Muni wears dark glasses, a cap, and rough clothes, which he likes best anyway. He has been known to tote a violin case as part of his disguise.

Maie West? Well, it seems that there's just no way to conceal her identity. She just sits for back in her cavernous limousine and tells Smokey to step on it.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

GAIL EVERETT, ambitions to become a designer, comes to New York and—due to a stroke of luck—hired by MADAME LIZETTE, proprietor of an exclusive shop, Madame proves temperamental and difficult to work for.

DEREK HARDING, young artist, is interested in Gail and offers her friendly advice. Frequently she sees DICK SEARLES, whose sister, ROSEMARY, was her roommate at school.

Meanwhile, in Arizona, MARK CHAPMAN, a wanderer, returns to find his old home in the hands of the Travers Mining Co. MARK suspects the deal is crooked, but does not know the whereabouts of his niece, Gail, the rightful owner of the property.

DEREK and Madam Lizette's son, representing the Travers company, Mark confides in his friend, old JED HOSKIN, and writes a letter to GILES HARDING, New York lawyer.

Derek agrees. A few days later a fashion writer advises Gail's work and, in a rage of jealousy, Madame Lizette discharges her.

Pied and discouraged over an unsuccessful search for work, Gail comes home, and finds a letter offering her $10,000 for the Arizona ranch.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXI

"DEREK," said Lucille in the soft tones she affected on occasion, "won't you let me give up this pose for a minute? Every muscle in my body feels cramped. I don't know if I can even move."

"I'm sorry!" Derek pushed aside his palette and brushes and held out a hand to her. "I didn't realize how long you'd been sitting there. Why don't you speak before?"

"You looked so desperately serious I was afraid to speak."

"Well, come on down now."

"I don't believe I can rise."

"There," exclaimed Derek, lifting her in his arms and setting her down on the couch. "Stretch out for a bit and you'll feel all right." He turned again to his canvas.

"It's not very nice of you to turn your back on me like that," Lucille complained. "Why can't you come and speak to me? I believe you are a woman hater! But there—even if one girl has treated you badly I don't see why you should be so mean to every other girl you meet."

"What's that you say?" Derek moved quickly across the room.

"Well, everyone knows you were crazy about Gail Everett and I'm sure she led you on, but—"

"Stop," he said. "I don't want to hear any more of that."

"So you still worship her?" Lucille laughed softly, tantalizingly. Then, slipping her hand in his, she said, "Derek, I want to help you. I've known Gail for years, and she's not worth worrying about. She loves admiration, but when the time comes when she's ready to settle down every one knows she'll marry Dick Searles."

"You're sure about that—quite sure?" asked Derek. The night before he had seen Gail and Dick together. He writhed as he remembered how her sunny head had almost touched the other man's. Derek had called Madame Lizette's shop that morning and learned that Gail was no longer connected with the firm. He'd called the club, too, only to be told that there was no one of that name there. He did not know that a new telephone operator was on duty—one with small sense of responsibility.

"Yes, Derek," Lucille went on softly. "I hate to say it, but I know it's true."

GILES HARDING's secretary stepped quietly into her employer's office. "Here's a special delivery for you," she said, handing him a letter.

"From Arizona? I was just beginning to wonder if Mark Chapman had decided to come east instead of writing." Harding took up a paper knife and slit the envelope.

Quickly his eyes raced across the closely written pages. A moment later he was pressing a button, summoning his secretary.

"I wish you'd call up Madame Lizette's shop," he told her, "and get Miss Everett on the line."

"Mark Chapman says he's heard that an offer is on the way to the girl," Harding explained. "It's the Traverses who want the place—he's given us authority to head them off, but we must get hold of Miss Everett at once."

"Oh!" exclaimed Miss West, rapidly dialing.

But when she got Madame Lizette's shop she was curtly informed that no Miss Everett was associated with the concern.

"Not there now!" Harding jumped from his chair as he heard the news. "By George, she surely hasn't accepted and gone west to close the deal. Get Miss Cranston's letter from the file. I think I wrote Gail Everett's address on it. Seems to me she was staying at some club."

GAIL was in her room. For the first time since Derek and she had become engaged he had failed to send her a letter. She could not think what had happened, and had finally called him up. There was no answer. Gail decided she would call again in the afternoon if she did not hear from him before 5. She could not dream that though Derek was in his studio, he had resolutely determined not to answer the telephone because he had a feeling that, since he had not written, Gail would surely call him. Loving Gail, he could not doubt her, and yet—

The telephone tinkled. Was it Derek, she wondered, as she lifted the receiver. "A gentleman to see you," announced the operator.

It must be Derek. Gail glanced in the mirror, smoothing her sunny hair, and adding a delicate touch of lipstick.

But when she reached the foyer Derek was nowhere in sight. She walked to the desk. "You called me a moment ago and said someone wished to see me."

"Yes, that gentleman over by the window."

It was not Derek! Gail's spirits sank. Had something happened to him?

"You wish to see me—Gail Everett?"

"Yes," replied the gentleman, rising. "I'm happy to meet you again, Miss Everett, though I don't suppose you remember me. I was a friend of your father's and attended to business affairs for him when you were at Miss Cranston's. I am Giles Harding."

"How do you do, Mr. Harding? I remember the name, though I cannot say I remember you."

GILES HARDING smiled. "I hardly expected you would. And now, I suppose you'll wonder what I'm doing here. I have some important news for you, but first, I wonder if you have had an offer for some property in Arizona?"

"Yes, I have. Isn't it all right? Don't tell me I'm a Cinderella once again, for I lost my job and this would be a perfect Godsend to me?" she asked eagerly.

"Oh, the property there's all right, but it is very valuable and I want to see that you don't give it away for a song. Before I go further, let me assure you that I have no interest in this affair except that, as a friend of your father's, I want to see that you are not fleeced. Also, your uncle has commissioned me to find you."

"My uncle?" Gail exclaimed.

"But I haven't a relative in the world! Surely there must be some mistake."

"No. I have the proof right here."

"Well, you just caught me in time," Gail said after the lawyer had talked for half an hour. "I was going to write tonight and tell this man to send me the money. But I can't understand this. You say the Traverses company wants the property, but they haven't made me an offer. It is some other man who wants it. I'll get the letter and show it to you."

Gail hastened to her room. She had an uncle; she was no longer all alone in the world! And the Rancho Angelo which had been her mother's home was hers.

Mungo Expected Rejoin Brooklyn

Fire Ball King May Join Dodgers at Cincinnati Saturday

NEW YORK —(P)—The one day revolt of Vnn Dingle Mungo, fire ball king of the Brooklyn Dodgers, came to an abrupt end Thursday with few shots and no casualties.

The Brooklyn front office announced the big right-hander, who quit the club in Pittsburgh Wednesday, had reconsidered his decision to go back to the farm unless sold or traded, and would rejoin the Dodgers in Cincinnati Saturday.

Mungo later denied he had reached an agreement with James Mulvey, a vice president of the club, with whom he talked Thursday, but hinted one is on the way.

"I'm to see Mulvey again Friday," he said. "That will decide it. I won't say I'm not going back to the club, but I'm not leaving tonight."

Reality

It is not pain we find so hard to bear
As the mask we wear.
It is not grief that brave men fear,
But eyes without a tear.
It's not the tomb that tears two souls apart,
It's death's shadow on love's heart.
Less is the obvious that we see
Than the dim intangibility.
Less the flame, the ash, the fire,
Than faith, a dream, man's high desire.
You saw the worm upon the sod,
And saw not God within the clod?
Wheat of the fields and fish of the sea—
And a still small voice from Galilee!
Is loaf, or fish, or the tossing sea
The only great Reality.—Selected.

Jesus Crucified

Text: Luke 23:33-46

Through the garden of Gethsemane we must follow Jesus to Calvary and the tragedy of the cross. When it became evident that the cup would not pass, but that He would have to drink it to the last drop, the spirit of Jesus seemed to find a new courage and a new calm through communion with the Father and through the consciousness that, even in the acceptance of a cruel death, He was fulfilling the Father's will.

It was, indeed, true that He could not save Himself, if He were to fulfill His mission.

If it seems hard to go with any reality the full length of this way to the cross, we should remember that a gentle mother who loved her Son went all the way, that she might be with Him in His dying hour.

In the description of those who stood by the cross in the hour of His death, we are told that the mother of Jesus was there. How much that tells of concerning Mary and the spirit of that woman whose privilege and honor it was to give birth to the Babe of Bethlehem!

She had treasured the token and prophecies of His prophetic mission, and through her heart must have been crushed with woe as she beheld her Son on the cross, there also must have been some ray of hope and some courage of faith that look her there to share His agony.

I have referred to the vividness of the picture of Christ in the garden of Gethsemane, and surely one must say the same for the story of the crucifixion. It, also, is expressed in a few sentences; but no story of modern times ever has surpassed in reality the record of these few words.

What a striking incident is this, of the two balefactors on crosses on either side of Jesus; and how beautiful the reality of Christ's salvation comes to light in the consciousness of one man that he has found peace and salvation as he expiates his misdeeds!

There is a suggestion, also, of the terror that attended the hour of Christ's death, as darkness came over the land and the veil of the temple was rent in twain. And in what simple, appalling words does the story come to an end, with the Master crying aloud, "Father, into Thy hands I commend My Spirit."

Glory and tragedy move in this record, which we see now in the light of Christ's resurrection and His eternal mission. As the experience reaches into the depths of human experience, so it reaches into the life of humanity age after age.

The story goes on, the struggle of truth against error, of goodness against evil, of love against hate. Men go the way of torture and suffering because they would find for themselves and for their fellows a higher and a better life; yet as the savans fall and are crucified, the life that they have lived goes on.

The spirit of the Christ cannot be crushed. The words of Jesus are vindicated, "I have overcome the world."

The Centennial

Congregations of the hundreds of churches throughout Arkansas will observe Centennial Sabbath Sunday, June 14, offering thanks for the momentous events which transpired 100 years ago Monday by which Arkansas achieved statehood.

Churches in counties, cities, towns and hamlets—from the handsomest brick edifices to the humblest frame buildings—will furnish the setting for reverent thanksgiving. Many churches have indicated that the services used 100 years ago will be followed for this occasion.

"This day following so soon on President's Day on June 10 and preceding Statehood day so closely should be observed appropriately and not overshadowed by these events which have so great a hold upon our imagination," the Rev. Calvin B. Waller, chairman of the Clergyman's Committee of the Arkansas Centennial Commission said.

"The spiritual significance of our statehood should not be overlooked, as it has had a major influence on our physical well being," said Dr. Waller. "The Commission and our committee extend our heartiest thanks to pastors and ministers, all of whom are co-operating with us."

Egyptians once paid taxes according to the rise of the Nile river. If the rise was great, crops would be plentiful, and the people could pay higher taxes. Marked poles were erected for measuring the exact water level.

News Restriction on Chinese Army

Thick Screen of Censorship Placed on Military Movements

HONGKONG — (AP) — South China teemed with military movements behind a thick screen of censorship Wednesday night.

Rigid news restrictions were applied on both provinces of the Canton government—Kwangtung and Kwangsi. Word reached here from Canton through surreptitious channels concerning military conscription of coolies, including women; of the Kwangsi army's arrival at Hengchow, important road junction in Hunan province to the north; of government threats to execute speculators in falling Kwangsi banknotes.

The soldiers were sent North with South China's warning that it would not stand for increasing Japanese military control.

Military Reported
(Reports reaching Shanghai said that two factions of the Kwangtung army had started fighting each other on the border of Southern Fukien province, one group opposing any move against the National Nanking government. Canton authorities, reports said, rushed reinforcements to the Fukien border to put down rebellious elements.)

Cantonese millarist confirmed reports that the Kwangsi army had reached Hengchow, and said the Kwangtung forces were expected to join it there by mid-month. The continued troop movements indicated the South Chinese were not satisfied with Nanking's offers for discussion of the Japanese resistance question.

STORIES IN STAMPS

By I. S. Klein

"MADAME LA RESSOURCE"

DAUGHTER of a Prussian field marshal, Catherine of Anhalt-Zerbst was determined to become a thorough Russian, when, in 1745, at the age of 15, she married Peter, nephew and heir to the Empress Elizabeth. To master the Russian language, she got up many a night and walked the floor barefoot, repeating her lessons.

Peter III soon depended on Catherine for his decisions, so much so that he called her "Madame La Ressource." But often he would insult and kick her. In 1762 he was dethroned and Catherine became empress. His death was said to be due to "apoplexy."

As empress, Catherine was one of the most resourceful and determined rulers of Russia. But the peasants' lot became worse and rebellions were numerous. She crushed them all, making life more miserable for the poor, while she lavished countless wealth on her numerous lovers. After 34 years of rule, Catherine died in 1796, of apoplexy, this time real.

Her portrait appears on one of Russia's stamps issued in 1913 to commemorate the tercentenary of the founding of the Romanoff dynasty.

Statehood Day Set for June 15

Governor Futrell Calls
Upon Citizens to Observe Occasion

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Governor Futrell Thursday proclaimed June 15 as Arkansas Statehood Day and called upon every citizen of the state to observe the occasion in appropriate celebration.

"It is very proper that the one hundredth anniversary of our great statehood be recognized and this memorable event be celebrated by every citizen of the state in this centennial year," said the executive proclamation.

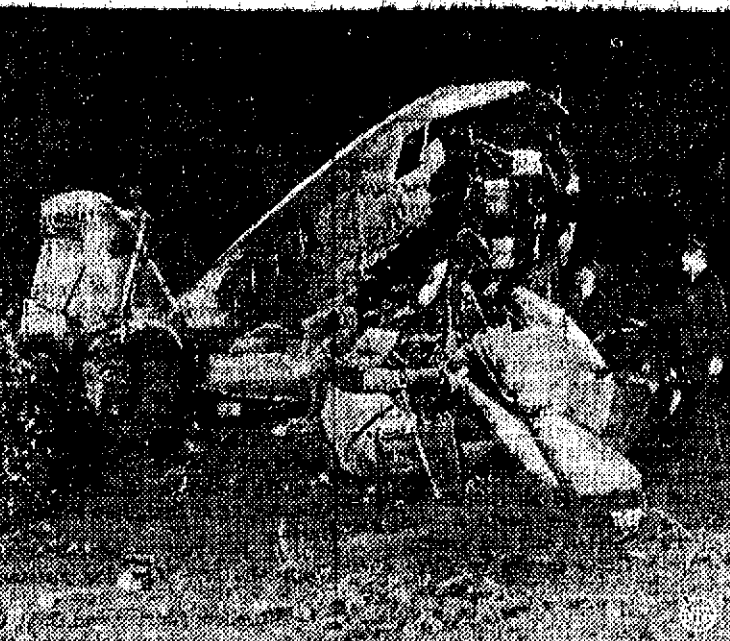

As excitement over President Roosevelt's visit subsided the centennial commission pushed ahead with plans for next Monday's Statehood Day observance along with other events of the six-month celebration.

Arkansas centennial stunts will go on sale Monday as the state observes admittance to the union a century ago. Appropriate exercises are planned in Little Rock with an afternoon parade.

Many July fourth celebrations are carried over the state in addition to numerous county centennial observances during the coming months.

The Miss Centennial contest closes in all counties Friday midnight. Final selections will be made June 26. County winners will compete in congressional district contests, the winners of which will be selected June 19.

15 Survive Chicago Plane Crash

Propeller, engine, and tail of this huge airliner were badly damaged, as shown above, after the plane rammed a house roof, then crashed, half a mile from Chicago's Municipal Airport, but 12 passengers and a crew of three escaped with slight injuries. Much of the damage was incurred when the ship, heading from New York, nosed into the ground, though landing upright. Cause of the accident was undetermined.

Meeting Closes

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Odus Wilkinson of Little Rock headed the Arkansas Drug Travelers Association Thursday night as more than 500 delegates to the conventions of that organization, its auxiliary and the Arkansas Pharmaceutical Association left the capital city for their homes.

While the travelers balloted, the pharmaceutical association installed officers elected Wednesday. The concurrent meetings of the organizations opened Tuesday.

Mrs. Harold Lawson of Little Rock is new president of the auxiliary. Other officers are Miss Margie Latimer, Dermott, vice president and Mrs. Hector R. Johnson, Pocahontas, secretary and treasurer.

Besides President Wilkinson other officers of the travelers group are E. O. Sheller, Hot Springs, vice president; Moses O. Hemby, Little Rock, second vice president; George A. Gray, Little Rock, re-elected treasurer; G. E. Cathright, Little Rock, re-elected secretary; Steve Smith, Arkadelphia, sergeant at arms and Sid Beasley, Hot Springs, chaplain.

No lion-tamer is Director George Cukor, but he does get the palm for performing feats almost as difficult as the lion-tamer's—that is, handling such tempestuous stars as Katharine Hepburn, Constance Bennett, and now Greta Garbo. But you can judge how amicably he works with the temperamental clan from this scene of a recent conference with the leading stars of "Romeo and Juliet." Cukor is shown at left, drawing nothing but smiles from, left to right, Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard, and John Barrymore.

Trade Gain Is Good Plank New Deal Leaders Assert

By PRESTON GROVER
WASHINGTON—(AP)—Part of the platform upon which Democrats rely is building up steadily—in the statistical reports showing improvement in industry and business.

Republicans and anti-New Deal industrialists already have attempted to undermine the Democrats' claim to credit, however, by asserting the improvement is the natural rebound of business using its own resources to get out of the depression, not the result of administration recovery efforts.

Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel corporation, stated this position at the recent meeting of the American Iron and Steel institute, when he said that while trade was improving it was impeded by fear of federal restraint.

"The attempts to translate emergency measures into a permanent condition of bureaucratic domination and control by government," he said, "have properly alarmed our people. People have come to realize that unless this condition is corrected, a real and lasting prosperity is not obtainable."

Headlines Write Platform
Democrats scoff at such arguments and merely continue to let newspaper headlines write that part of the "platform." Samples:
Retail sales for the last week of May moved 10 to 16 per cent ahead of the same week a year ago.
Automobile output was estimated at 109,821 units compared with 65,675 in the corresponding week of 1935.

Net operating income of a representative group of large railroads for April was 16.8 per cent above April a year ago.

A bit of trade news that should be particularly pleasing to builders of the Democratic platform is a summary showing the demand brisk beyond seasonal expectations for summer home furnishings. These include porch and garden equipment, fancy window shades and fiber rugs. That sort of spending represents pleasure money.

See Building Boom

Perhaps even more satisfying to Democratic platform builders, as evidence of long range industrial improvement is a report of rising rents over the nation. An index of wide circulation records a rental increase of more than 20 per cent since a post-depression rise was first noticeable early in 1934.

To market analysts, steadily increasing rent represents a stimulus to building. It means to them that when rents reach a point where the home owner, store owner or factory operator can build for the same outlay as his rent, naturally he will build.

Stimulating construction has been one of the greatest difficulties faced by President Roosevelt in his efforts to speed up the durable goods industries.

If Past Forty, Try This Laxative

If you have taken laxatives over a period of years, and your system is "worn out" with their harsh, unnatural effect—try Pepp-a-salt, the delightful chewing gum laxative. As soon as you start chewing it, the stimulating mint flavor brings a clean, fresh taste to the mouth. The force of digestive juices is increased and the laxative is acted with them and carried into the system easily. The laxative passes through the stomach and into the bowels so scientifically that your action is wonderfully easy, yet thorough. Because this digestive channels receive helpful toning up from the salivary juices, try the pleasant, refreshing Pepp-a-salt way. Doctors prescribe the laxative ingredient for both children and adults. It is non-habit-forming. Sold on a money-back guarantee. Generous family size package 125 and 250.

Leader for Civil War Vets Selected

General Atkinson Will Succeed Rene Lee as Commander

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP)—General Atkinson, 58-year-old veteran of Petersburg, Va., Thursday was elected commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans to succeed General Harry Rene Lee of Nashville, Tenn.

Atkinson, commander of the army of Northern Virginia, immediately appointed Lee his adjutant general and chief of staff. Atkinson defeated General J. M. Claypool of St. Louis by a vote of 212 to 223.

The election climaxed the 46th annual reunion of the "boys in gray" who will march bravely through many of their comrades in previous parades will be missing, in a final parade through the streets here Friday.

That no reunion file was selected for a 1937 meeting-place was taken to indicate the present reunion might be the last for the aged veterans of the war between the states.

The venerable soldiers adopted a resolution, however, after agitated debate, to meet jointly with the Grand Army of the Republic, their foes in the war between the states, in 1938, at Gettysburg, Pa. Governor George H. E. of Pennsylvania had sent a personal invitation to the Confederate veterans to participate in a joint meeting.

Sister Mary's Kitchen

By Mrs. Mary E. Dague

Nothing will so quickly build up your reputation as a most charming hostess as mastering the art of serving delicious, cold drinks on hot summer afternoons.

With some flavoring syrups on hand, you'll never be at a loss when unexpected guests arrive.

And other refreshing hot-day drinks can be made in combination with ice cream.

Lemonade, of course, is an ideal beverage, made with one ripe lemon to each tall glass. Add two or three teaspoons sugar to each glass, fill with cold water and chilled ice, garnish with a sprig of mint or a tiny slice of orange and serve.

Try adding a dash of lemon juice or lime juice to grape juice occasionally for variety's sake. Dilute somewhat with ice water before serving.

Grape fruit juice and pineapple juice, alone or in combination, are exceptionally good with grape juice, too.

Pineapple Juice Is Zestful
Pineapple juice, popular as a breakfast beverage, makes a delightful refreshing cool drink. Try it with a scoop of ice cream.

When you serve ice cream in cold drinks, add it last. A couple tablespoons to each glass is enough.

Less sugar is needed, because ice cream is sweet. Ginger ale and root beer are general favorites to serve as ice cream coolers.

Best of garnishes for cold drinks is a sprig of mint. If you have no mint, your grocer can get it for you.

To keep mint cool and crisp, wrap it in a damp, clean cloth and place it near the ice. It will stay fresh for days and the cold doesn't seem to make it lose its fragrant bouquet.

Avoid Watery Beverages
Remember, too, that when you chill a beverage with ice, the ice dilutes the drink. If guests are expected, make your drink and cool on ice until wanted for serving. Then if you do drop an ice cube in it for the sake of the tempting tinkle, there will be no danger of serving too watery a beverage.

Also remember to sip cold drinks slowly. Not only do they have a more lasting, cooling effect if taken this way, but they are much better for you.

Take care not to make a summer time drink too sweet. A tart drink quenches thirst much better than a sweet one.

United States is the second largest in the country. It once was capitalized at $6,000,000 and employed 4,000,000 persons.

Hurdling Hedge Into Olympic Picture

Right into Olympic competition went Capt. C. C. Jadin, rider, and Joe Aleshire, horse, as they hurdled a difficult jump in team exhibition at Blind Brook Club, N. Y., over the difficult Prix de Nations course. Rider and animal, U. S. army entrant, are en route to Berlin, where they will condition themselves for equestrian events.

Mexico Acclaims Youth for Daring Hop Over Mountain in Flimsy Plane

By J. P. McKnight

MEXICO CITY.—(AP)—Mexico, increasingly air-minded, is proud of young Miguel Carrillo.

A self-made aviator if ever there was one, the 27-year-old pilot flew to Mexico City recently from his home town, Zitacuaro, Michoacan, in a tiny airplane he built out of odds and ends and learned to pilot himself.

No Atlantic crossing, surely, was Carrillo's 80-mile flight across Mexico's rugged mountain ranges at an average speed of 40 miles an hour, but his feat captured public fancy.

Innovator of Aeroplanes
Throngs gathered at Balbuena airport to shake his hand, and hear him express the modest hope the government would "help me in some serious study of aviation and mechanics, so that I may do whatever I can to further aviation in Mexico."

That was the surprising thing about Carrillo's exploit: never in his life, he said, had he studied or read about aerodynamics, draftsmanship or mechanics.

He just "got the bug," and set to work on his plane.

Wren Truck Motor Used
A four-cylinder motor from an ancient truck, that already had seen six years and 35,000 miles service over mountain roads, furnished his power plant. From another truck he got his radiator. The cooling apparatus he devised from tin plate. Light, tough native woods went into the ship's frame.

As he carried forward the work, his funds ran out. He sold his house. When those proceeds were gone, he borrowed from friends until the ship was ready.

Carrillo christened it "Pinocho," after Spain's long-nosed equivalent of Mickey Mouse. A few test hops, and he was off for the capital.

With the departments of communications and war decidedly interested in Carrillo's obvious hint for aerodynamics, it seems fairly likely he will get his chance to learn about flying from books. A movement has started to give him the "Enrique Carranza" gold medal for achievement in aviation.

He just "got the bug," and set to work on his plane.

Summer Pastures

Having a satisfactory summer pasture for dairy cows is no easy matter, and it does not just happen. A plentiful supply of summer pasture is one of the most essential things in maintaining high summer production at low cost. Consequently, careful planning for the summer pasture will pay high dividends.

Permanent pastures and early spring seeded pastures were somewhat damaged by the late freeze and by lack of rainfall this spring. This makes it more important than ever to sow an emergency summer pasture crop. It is not too late to plant such crops as Sudan Grass for pasture, and sorghums to be cut and fed green.

Sudan Grass should be planted on medium or better soil on a well-prepared seed bed. It may be broadcast, drilled, solid with grain drill, or in rows with a planter. No cultivation is necessary where it is broadcast solid.

Sudan will usually be knee high in 4 to 6 weeks which is the proper height to start pasturing. The amount of moisture and the fertility of the soil will determine the rapidity and the amount of growth. Sudan grass should not be allowed to produce seed as seed production limits further growth. It is a good practice to mow the crop when heads appear if it is not pastured closely enough to prevent heading.

Grass sorghum will make a good green crop to cut and feed each day after the heads begin to appear. These sorghum crops are more trouble to feed than a pasture crop, but they will grow more successfully on land that is low in fertility and the cost of seeding is lower.

Emergency crops are profitable for maintaining milk production during hot weather when many other pasture crops suffer from unfavorable weather.

Ground Limestone

Farmers who want to grow lime-loving crops will appreciate the fact that the application to crop land of ground limestone, or its equivalent, is approved by the Soil Conservation Program as a soil-building practice, and qualifies a farmer to receive a grant not to exceed his soil-building allowance.

It is specified in the regulations, that to qualify for payment, limestone must be applied to soil conserving crops or pastures and must be applied in 1936 before October 31.

The rate of payment per acre depends on the rate of application, being 70 cents for each 1000 pounds up to 4000 pounds.

Farmers who are planning to plant alfalfa in September will want to consider whether or not their soil needs lime, and how much. If lime is needed for alfalfa (in most cases it is) it is better to apply it several weeks before planting the alfalfa and harrow it into the soil.

Other forms of lime besides ground limestone may be used, such as burnt lime and hydrated lime. If these are used smaller amounts per acre are needed to get the same results. Six hundred pounds of burnt lime or 100 pounds of hydrated lime is equivalent to 1000 pounds of ground limestone.

THE ONLY SMALL THING ABOUT A BUICK

LOOK high and look low throughout this smart and spirited Buick SPECIAL, and you'll find only one thing about it that's anything but big.

It's big in its inches, length and breadth—big in the ample, stretch-out space it supplies to driver and passengers alike.

It's big in its power—it hasn't found a hill it couldn't easily master, or a driver it couldn't thrill by the fervor of its quick response, the smoothness of its stride.

It's big in the measure of its quality, seen and unseen—every nut and bolt and strut and part is eloquent testimony to Buick's insistence that the best alone will do.

It's big in the pleasure it can bring you—pleasure that comes from handling a sparkling and superior performer—pleasure that's yours from owning a car so obviously better than mere transportation requires.

It's big in the satisfactions it yields—from the smartness of its valid streamline style, from the surety of its comfort, and your knowledge that the family couldn't be safer in a car.

It's big in every way, until you reach for the tag that names the price—then you find that it's only a short step up from the lowest-priced field to the Buick of your dreams.

$765* and up, list at Flint, the price tag on the Buick SPECIAL, Series 40, reads, and the terms are within anyone's reach.
